2010. Entering the new decade, have we done enough to secure our information? Or will we be found wanting by the end of this decade? History is a great teacher, only if we learn from it. Will we allow history to repeat itself - a decade with the same problems, added with more sophistication and finesse from hackers? Something needs to be done. Will this new decade be the turning point where we are the tip of the proverbial spear, striking fear into unethical hackers, halting their progress?
